COURSE DESCRIPTION

Faculty involved in teaching medical students and residents have a need to improve their teaching techniques and to understand new concepts in learning. A better understanding of academic career development and the issues facing women and under-represented minorities in academic medical centers will also help all faculty.

This Colloquium is intended to meet these needs by providing both lectures and interactive workshops covering a variety of topics. Interactive sessions with posters by Colloquium participants will foster the interchange of ideas.

ACTIVITY OBJECTIVES

After attending this Colloquium, the participant will:

- ◆ Realize a clearer appreciation of issues regarding diversity in the academic medical center.
- ◆ Integrate new ideas regarding teaching and learning, from the lecture hall to the bedside.
- ◆ Develop strategies for mentoring and academic career planning.

ACTIVITY DIRECTORS

Vivian Lewis, M.D.

Associate Dean, Faculty Development - Women & Diversity
Professor, Obstetrics & Gynecology

Denham S. Ward, M.D., Ph.D.

Associate Dean, Faculty Development - Medical Education
