What parents need to know about the COVID vaccine for kids

In this People magazine feature, University of Rochester Medical Center infectious disease expert Jennifer Nayak, MD, and pediatrician Elizabeth Murray, DO, explain why the COVID pediatric vaccine is effective, thoroughly tested, and safe for children.

Learn more »

Study links fracking with higher heart attack risk

URMC researchers measured the impact of fracking on cardiovascular health by studying heart attack hospitalization and death rates on either side of the New York/Pennsylvania line, states with very different fracking policies.

Learn more »

School of Nursing to expand to accommodate exponential student growth

The historic Helen Wood Hall is getting a three-story, 22,000 square foot addition that will include state-of-the-art simulation labs, augmented and virtual-reality equipment, and much more.

Learn more »

URMC joins clinical trial to study COVID vaccine in pregnancy

"The immune system is suppressed during certain stages of pregnancy," said Angela Branch, MD, associate professor of infectious diseases. "We need to make sure COVID vaccines protect pregnant people as well as they protect everyone else."

Learn more »

Promoting vitality in aging

Thursday, June 10
Noon—2 p.m. (ET)

Leaders from the University of Rochester Aging Institute will share the Institute's vision as well as research discoveries that could slow aging and achieve rejuvenation.

Learn More »

Join us during the weekend of June 4—6 for the VIRTUAL Stroll for Strong Kids and 5K! Go the distance for Golisano Children's Hospital and celebrate 25 years of the Stroll! You'll help ensure that kids in our community have access to the highest-quality pediatric care for generations to come.

Learn More »

Social media highlight

Make a gift to the School of Nursing

Nurses are healers, educators, researchers, leaders, and advocates. Our students are the next generation of nurses who will make a real difference in the world. In honor of National Nurses Month, consider a gift to the School.

Make a gift »