Ethics in Healthcare: Facing the Challenges Together

Friday, April 1, 2022, 7:30 – 3:45

Location: University of Rochester School of Nursing,
Helen Wood Hall, 255 Crittenden Boulevard, Rochester, NY

Conference Objectives:

1. Provide educational opportunities on a range of ethical topics pertinent to healthcare and clinical practice. Some ideas for workshops are (but not limited to):

Ethical concerns raised by COVID pandemic	Health disparities and justice
How to lead an effective debriefing session	Religion and miracles
Conscientious objection	Allocation of resources
Moral distress	Physician-aid-in-dying
Futility/ non-beneficial treatment	Communication techniques
2. Engage professionals from all disciplines in focused workshops that encourage group discussion and engagement in the topic.
3. Improve outreach and communication about health care ethics within the Rochester community.

Guide for Workshop Proposals: Workshops will be 75 minutes in length. Please incorporate opportunities for group engagement and discussion: this should not be simply a didactic talk. Proposals should include: a title, 2 objectives for the session, and a brief overview of content and teaching methods. The submission should be double spaced, 12 font and no more than 1 page long. Include your name, title, and contact information including preferred e-mail address and phone number.

Notification of acceptance: By December 10, 2021.

Sponsored by the Paul M. Schyve Center for Bioethics, the UR Division of Medical Humanities & Bioethics and the UR School of Nursing
