Community-Based Participatory Research Training Program: Aims to train University of Rochester researchers (faculty, trainees and students) and community members in community-engaged research using community-based participatory research (CBPR) principles.

The course offers an introduction to CBPR principles from the foundations, to communication, funding and sustainability. Through the program, participants will form relationships and research teams to co-develop and submit proposals for the CBPR Pipeline-to-Pilot Awards. The training will be offered from September 2019 through April 2020 and co-facilitated by community partners and University of Rochester researchers. Facilitators include Sherita Bullock (Healthy Baby Network), Brooke Levandowski (Ob/Gyn), Tiffany F'lloyd (Public Good Projects), Sarah Farash Alexander, Diane Morse (Psychology), Charles Kamen (Cancer Control), Lori Dewindt and Jenna Stewardson (National Center for Deaf Health Research), George Moses (North East Area Development) and Silvia Sorensen (Warner School of Education).

Registration for the Program is open until August 26 at CBPR Program Registration.

Contact Indrani Singh for questions and to request any accommodations during the program. Program sessions will take place on Tuesday evenings from 5:30-8PM at the Center for Community Health & Prevention and other community locations. Free parking is available on-site at all locations. The program is available at no cost to participants.
