

American Cancer Society

Residents will work with the director of the local chapter of the American Cancer Society on ongoing projects it is undertaking, many of which are done in conjunction with other chapters in New York State and/or county health departments. In the past, residents have worked on launching an effort to increase the number of Tobacco Free College Campuses in New York State, including creating a CD tool-kit for advocates. During this rotation, residents will learn about how the American Cancer Society is organized and managed from the National level down to the local level, may have the opportunity to interact with the local board of directors, develop presentations for the Society at a local level—for the lay public and for general practitioners-- and assist with developing health policy initiatives.
