Updated date: January 24, 2017. Registration and event information through the link above.

Grantmanship for Students and Postdocs: F30, F31, E32 - November 2, 2016 | New York, NY

Unable to attend our workshop next week? Join Science Alliance to learn the skills for concise and persuasive writing that is not only vital in academia, but essential for any career path. During this evening seminar Dr. Jaime Rubin and a panel with recipients of these fellowships will focus on best practices for effective grant writing, specifically applied to individual pre-doctoral and post-doctoral fellowship applications in the biomedical fields. Register for either the event of the webinar above!

Course Announcement: IND 410 Mastering Scientific Information

This fall, CIRTL is offering five online courses, each focusing on a different aspect of inclusive, evidence-based pedagogy. Course registration opened Monday, August 1. CIRTL is also offering five workshops and four drop-in event series this fall. Follow the links for more information. Each program is web-based and can be completed via blackboard and Moodle. All of our workshops include an interactive, online session with assignments before and after to help participants develop a specific, concrete product. Follow the links above for more information.

by John A. Goldsmith, John Komlos, Penny Schine Gold

The University of Rochester Clinical and Translational Science Institute and the CTP are excited to sponsor a lunch to begin a dialogue around the needs of underrepresented graduate students and postdoctoral fellows across URMC disciplines to develop the support necessary for their career as successful researchers. As part of the conversation, leaders from the David T. Kearns Center Graduate Students of Color group will be present to help facilitate the dialogue. Please join us for a Dinosaur Bar-B-Que lunch, and to discuss how we can help address the needs of URMC underrepresented graduate students and postdoctoral fellows. To RSVP, contact John P. Callum, PhD, CTSI Director of Diversity and Inclusion.
