

David L. Kaye, M.D. is a child/adolescent psychiatrist and Professor of Psychiatry at the University at Buffalo (UB) Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences. Dr. Kaye received his medical degree from the University of Vermont in 1977 and subsequently completed his residency training in general and child/adolescent psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin. He has been on the faculty at the University at Buffalo since 1982, established the residency training program in child/adolescent psychiatry in 1991, and remained the Director of Training until 2014. Since that time he has been Vice Chair for Academic Affairs in the Department of Psychiatry. Since 2010 he has also been the Medical Director for the multi-university New York state-wide pediatric collaborative care program, CAP PC (Child and Adolescent Psychiatry for Primary Care), regional provider for Project TEACH (www.projectteachny.org). The program received the APA Psychiatric Services Bronze Medal in 2016-17 as a model program. Dr. Kaye has published papers and chapters on a variety of topics, including education, collaboration with primary care, and psychodynamic psychotherapy in children and adolescents. He is the first author on a book for primary care providers entitled Child and Adolescent Mental Health (Lippincott Williams and Wilkins 2002). He has presented frequently at national meetings and has been a leader in national organizations, including the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry (AACAP) and the American Association of Directors of Psychiatric Residency Training (AADPRT), serving as President in 2009-10. He has also been on the PRITE (Psychiatry Resident In Training Exam) and Child PRITE Editorial Boards from 1996-2009 and was a regular examiner for the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology oral exams until their sunset. He has received two of AACAP's highest awards as recipient of the Catchers in the Rye award in 2016 and Rieger Service Program Award for Excellence in 2017. He has been selected as a Best Doctor in America numerous occasions, and is a Distinguished Fellow of both the American Psychiatric Association and the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry.
