Breast cancer survivor says she found stability in the “village” at Wilmot

Cheryl Rivers, a hardworking mom, was used to being a rock to the people around her. But after a stage 2 breast cancer diagnosis, she had trouble finding stability—until she came to the Wilmot Cancer Institute. “They say it takes a village to raise a child. It’s kind of the same concept when you’re going through cancer,” she reflects.

The current and future role of single-port robotic surgery

The da Vinci single port (SP) robotic surgical system, which made its clinical debut in 2018, represents a significant technological advance in robotic surgery. While it does not fully replace the capabilities of the multi-port system, it represents a potential new approach for several major robotic urological procedures.
