Rochester Pride Parade
After the devastating shooting in an Orlando nightclub, which left 49 victims dead, most of whom were Latinx LGBTQ folks, it is more important than ever to stand in solidarity with our LGBTQ friends, family, patients and community members. As the largest employer in the city, the University of Rochester's active participation in reflection and actions aimed at more equitable treatment of LGBTQ folks is vital. The university held several vigils to remember the victims. Additionally, as with previous years, the university will march in this year's Pride Parade.

The 2016 Rochester Pride Parade is scheduled for Saturday, July 16th on Alexander St. & Park Ave. The parade is scheduled to take place from 1-3 pm with a noon lineup. To march with the university please RSVP online. The University of Rochester Office of the President, Susan B. Anthony Center, Pride Alliance and Office for Faculty Development and Diversity are sponsors in this year's Pride Parade.

When marching in the parade, please remember that Pride parades started to celebrate members of the LGBTQ community who have been marginalized through acts of violence and discrimination. The parade is a time for LGBTQ people and their allies to join together in fun and solidarity against hate.

Health Happens Where You Live...Did You Know?
Many of us walk around busy and stressed out and this can cause unhealthy eating patterns, whether that be eating too much junk food or skipping meals altogether. Fortunately, meal planning can help. By planning your meals in advance you can avoid buying unnecessary snacks, saving you time and money when grocery shopping. Different apps can also facilitate meal planning by helping you find recipes or even creating a shopping list. You can put aside a designated time of the week to prepare your meals and take them on the run when you need to eat. This can help you avoid relying on quick junk food when you're feeling hungry, putting fast food money back in your pocket and helping you consume healthier meals. Try a new recipe every week or two, and keep your favorites in a recipe book so you have something to turn to when you need ideas creating fun and tasty meals.

Young Psychiatry Volunteer Gifts Kitchen Play Set

Samantha's mother, Corey Nichols-Hadeed, works closely with the Children's Center through the Laboratory of Interpersonal Violence and Victimization (LIVV) in the Department of Psychiatry.

The Children's Center, directed by Eileen Whitney, is operated through the Department of Psychiatry and provides kids with a safe place to stay while their parents are in court. The center can provide a space for up to 12 children at a time, ages six weeks to twelve years old. Children stay in the Center anywhere from a few minutes to a few days. The Children's Center served 4,034 children in 2015, and provided 1,294 referrals for services. The Center operates through the help of Psychiatry staff, as well as volunteers from the Friends of Strong Program, MCC student interns and Americorps members.
