Dr. Yeates Conwell wears many hats, including Vice Chair and Professor of Psychiatry, Director of the Geriatric Psychiatry Program and Director of American Foundation For Suicide Prevention (AFSP) National Board.
In his roles he has been very active in educating the community about mental health and suicide risk in older adults. One way he has accomplished this is through the creation of short videos with AFSP (e.g., "The Four D’s of Suicide Risk in Older Adults" and "Suicide: It’s Okay to Ask"). His expertise is also frequently solicited. He recently contributed to multiple articles in the New York Times as well as The Independent, among others.
