OHRP is delighted to announce an education workshop for research investigators and coordinators relatively new to human subjects research.

Please pass the information to relevant personnel.

The Office for Human Research Protections (OHRP) co-hosts with The Office of Extramural Research (OER) at the National Institutes of Health
A one-day pre-seminar workshop

“Getting through Human Research Reviews with Skill”
On Wednesday October 14, 2015
At the 2015 NIH Regional Seminar, Hilton San Diego Bayfront in San Diego, California

This workshop aims to provide participants with the skill and knowledge necessary to have their NIH grant applications and research protocols pass reviews for human research protections. It will focus on clarifying confusions and providing participants with practical tips and solutions to problems and difficulty commonly encountered during such reviews.

This activity has been approved for 5.75 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit

REGISTER NOW (http://regionalseminars.od.nih.gov/sandiego2015/registration/) if you answer YES to any of the following questions:

- Do you feel quite baffled by the different requirements on human research protections and wondered how you could get ahead of the process?
- Are you sometimes confused when a research using data collected from human participants is considered ‘human subjects research’ and when it is not?
- Have you ever felt frustrated with the IRB process and wished that they would just tell you what to do?

Contacts and Questions:

* Event Organizer, at NIHRegionalSeminars@mail.nih.gov for questions related to registration
* The Office for Human Research Protections, at OHRP-EDU@hhs.gov for questions regarding program content