SCHOLARSHIP

Scholarship — Associate Professor

Demonstrable success in developing and sustaining a distinct identity as a scholar with an area of focused expertise, as evidenced by:

- Publications
  - May include any of the following
    - Peer-reviewed journals (at least some publications must be in this category)
    - Review papers
    - Book chapters, monographs, or books
    - Other written professional communications
    - Written communications to non-professional audiences (if relevant to area of expertise)
  - Quality as a primary determinant
    - Demonstrable impact in advancing the field
      - Originality
      - Significance
      - Influence on subsequent work by others
  - Number of publications may vary, as the number and timing of publications are of importance primarily as evidence of sustained research productivity
  - Authorship demonstrating stewardship of at least some of the intellectual content
    - First or senior author
    - Co-authorship of papers first-authored by mentees

- Other scholarly products
  - Examples may include
    - Course syllabi
    - Teaching manuals or other teaching materials
    - Policies, procedures, or other administrative materials
    - Audio, video, software, or other media projects
    - Patents or inventions (including evidence for impacting the field, e.g., licensing by others)
  - Evidence that these products are scholarly may include either of the following
    - Fulfills the 3 ‘Ps’
      - A clear Product that can be reproduced and built upon
      - Is open to Peer review
      - Is disseminated Publicly
    - Fulfills Glassick criteria
      - Clear goals
      - Adequate preparation
      - Appropriate methods
      - Significant results
      - Effective presentation
      - Reflective critique

- Funding
  - Competitive funding to support scholarship is not required
  - However, for some types of scholarship, evidence of grant funding as PI or in other roles may be
    - Necessary or helpful to enable the work’s success
    - Evidence toward fulfilling the criteria for scholarship above